DARING FRED ARCHER.

Sketch of the Deceased Wealthy Jockey—He Suicides in a Delirium.

A Career of Remarkable Success—A Phenomenal Rider—Keen Intellect.

The cable dispatches to THE TIMES a few days since announced that one of the most remarkable figures in England disappeared with the death of the jockey, Fred Archer. The British jockey has risen faster during the last twenty years than almost any other character we can think of, and Archer has risen to the top of the jockeys. He was not only the employee of lords and ladies, but he was their companion, too; perhaps sometimes he might have bulldozed them a little, and he was the idol of the great British public that cultivates an interest for the turf.

But he was a phenomenal rider. He rode like an imp of Sheol, but with the keen intellect of Sheol's master. He had the artist's seat and the artist's hand. He nearly always jumped off with the lead, and, if he didn't, no thundering gap of flying steeds was too narrow or risk for him to steer through it. He gave his horses his own energy, and, if that failed, he had peculiar powers in store such as will make many racers hear with satisfaction of the death of the young man who scored their sides as they were never scored before. His nickname was odd. To a rider of his dash the Britishers would have naturally given their favorite title, but the veteran George Fordham had already won that, and so the public looked at Archer's other noticeable characteristic, his wealth, and called him "the Tinman." Take him for all in all, it will be a long time before his mate is looked on. It is said that his illness was typhoid fever. The first symptoms of the disease appeared on the Thursday previous to his sad death, after he had been present at the Lewis races. When it became evident that his illness was likely to be serious he was taken to his sister's house at Newmarket. He grew worse rapidly, and was in a raging fever during the morning. He was left alone for a few minutes, and his attendant, shortly after leaving the sick room, heard two pistol shots. He hurried back and found Archer dying. The jockey had shot himself with a revolver.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

Fred. Archer was beyond dispute the greatest jockey of his day. He was born a rider. His father, William Archer, was a plucky cross-country jockey, whose last recorded mount was in the Liverpool Grand National Steeplechase in 1858, where he landed first on Little Charley in a dashing field of fifteen. Fred was a little more than one year old at that time, having been born on Jan. 11th, 1857. After that the father kept the King's Arms, Prestbury, a well-known resort for horsemen and crack jockeys, from whom young Fred is said to have received many points as he grew up. At this time one of the most famous trainers in all England was Mathew Dawson, and he has retained his reputation to the present time. He was of a family of trainers, having three brothers, all of whom were famous and rich. At the age of 12 young Archer was apprenticed to Mathew Dawson, and took a place as stable boy on equal terms with a number of other lads. He was an apt pupil, and his natural talent was quickly developed.

In September, 1870, one year after he was bound to Dawson, Archer had a mount in a race. He achieved a victory on Athol Daisy for the Nursery Handicap at Chesterfield.

HIS FIRST IMPORTANT RACE

was on Mr. Radcliffe's Salvanas in the Cesarewitch of 1872, the horse, a three-year-old, carrying 77 pounds. He landed a winner this time also. He here first attracted the attention of Lord Falmouth, who soon after made him his chief jockey in place of Tom French. Archer did not appear again in public, however, until 1874, when he began that career of splendid victories which did not end until his death. His first victory in the classic race was on Atlantic in the Two Thousand Guineas of that year. A month previous he had won the Lincoln Handicap with Tomahawk, who carried 8 [illegible] Archer's weight at this time was only [illegible] pounds, yet in the Two Thousand Guineas and the Derby (in which he was third) he was on a horse whose weight in each race was 122 pounds.

HIS FIRST TWO-YEAR-OLD RACE.

His first great two-year-old race was on Ladylove in the Woodcote Stakes. His first Derby victory was on Silvio in 1877. In 1880 he won it again on Bend Or. In 1881 he landed Mr. Lorillard's Iroquois a winner in the same race. In 1875 he won the Oaks on Springaway, in 1878 on Jannette, and in 1879 on Wheel of Fortune. In 1877 and 1878 he won the St. Leger on Silvio and Jannette, and in 1881 and 1882 the same race with Iroquois and Dutch Oven. In 1874 and 1879 he won the Two Thousand Guineas on Atlantic and Charlbert. He won the One Thousand in 1875 on Springaway, and in 1879 on Wheel of Fortune. In the City and Suburban in 1876 he won on Thunder with 130 pounds up, in 1877 on Julius Cesar at 108 pounds, in 1879 on Parole at 119 pounds, in 1880 on Master Kildare at 128 pounds, and in 1881 on Bend Or at 126 pounds. He won the Dewhurst Plate on Wheel of Fortune, Bal Gal, and Dutch Oven. The Cesarewitch he won on Rosebery. He won the French Derby in 1880 and 1882, and the Grand Prix in 1882. With Parole he won the City and Suburban, Great Metropolitan, and the Great Cheshire Stakes in 1879, while in 1881 he in turn rode Iroquois when he won the Derby, Prince of Wales, and St. Jame's Palace Stakes at Ascot and the St. Leger at Doncaster. He frequently received $500 for winning a race, and several times as much as $1,500. Mr. Pierre Lorillard gave him $5,000 when he won the Derby on Iroquois.

HIS MARRIED LIFE.

On Jan. 3, 1883, Archer married Miss Nellie Rose Dawson, niece of the famous trainer under whom he had learned to ride, and daughter of John Dawson, also a famous trainer. It probably made the greatest stir socially that Newmarket ever saw. Lord Hastings sent a prize bullock for a public barbecue, to which Archer added 1,000 loaves of bread and 1,000 pints of beer. The number of presents received from the nobility of the land was great, "enough to almost fill his house," as one account said. The value of the presents was a fortune. He was devoted to his wife, and when she died, in the fall of 1884, it nearly broke his heart. It was to get away from Newmarket and its associations soon after her death that he came to America. He was here only a short time. He received invitations from Pierre Lorillard and other well known horse owners to visit their farms, and he was urged to take a mount at Brighton Beach, which was still open after he arrived on Nov. 23, but he declined to accept any of them, preferring to go skurrying across the country and see the sights, such as Niagara Falls, the great lakes, and the scenery in the south.

NOTES OF HIS LIFE.

Archer won the Two Thousand Guineas five times in the last twelve years, beginning with Lord Falmouth's Atlantic in 1874, and ending with the Duke of Westminster's Ormonde this year. He won the Derby five times—with Silvio in 1877, Bend Or in 1880, Iroquois in 1881, Melton in 1885, and Ormonde this year.

Archer was 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighed when here 119 pounds. For the past year he had to sweat in to keep within 118 pounds. He looked more like a divinity student than the most daring jockey of his age. He was of a thrifty turn, having accumulated not far from a quarter of a million dollars, it is said.

A FORCED MARRIAGE.

Mrs. Sebright Gives Her Testimony in the Divorce Suit—Revolting Treatment.

In her evidence in the suit brought in London by Mrs. Arthur Sebright, who petitioned to have her marriage declared void on the ground that she was not a consenting party in the ceremony, and that the marriage had never been consummated, on being called to the witness stand testified that through her father she had inherited in her own name $120,000 in addition to a reversion of $150,000 on the death of her mother. She had met Mr. Sebright when she was but 15 years of age, and the acquaintance had been continuous. He proposed marriage to her after they had been acquainted a short time only, but her mother declined to permit the engagement. Sebright continued his visits to the house, however, and was received on terms of friendship. Finally Sebright induced the witness to engage herself to him in marriage, unknown to her mother. After this he persuaded her from time to time to sign "bits of paper" which he supplied. Eventually the witness ascertained she had appended her name to notes and bills, and made herself liable for sums amounting to $16,625. Writs were served upon her for these amounts. She then appealed to Sebright. He said the only way in which she could save herself from ruin was by marrying him. This, the witness said, she refused to do. Sebright next requested the witness to meet him alone. She did so, and he took her to a place unknown to her, but which she learned was a registry office. She wished to leave the room the moment she found where she was. Count Balhorney, a friend of Sebright's who was present, blocked the door and Sebright said to her that he would shoot her if she dared show that she was not acting with free will in the marriage which he was to have performed between them. He then forced a ring on her finger and the witness threw it off and again tried to leave the room. Sebright seized her by the arm and forced her back and made her sign the register. Witness said she did not hear the registrar read the form of marriage, nor hear him say anything. "I was too upset and too dreadfully frightened," she declared, to hear anything at the time.

The registrar being sworn, deposed that when Mrs. Sebright was before him she was agitated, but she repeated the marriage declaration without any hesitation, and also the marriage form when Sebright took her hand. Subsequently the lady threw the marriage ring on the floor, but signed the registracy without hesitation or demurring.

THE EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Prof. Saunders Outlines the Curriculum Likely to be Adopted.

While in Winnipeg the other day to a Sun reporter Prof. Saunders stated, relative to the experimental farm, that it was contemplated to experiment in all departments of agriculture which are likely to be successfully carried on in the Northwest, also in horticulture and in the growth of such varieties of forest trees as might be suitable to the plains. A great deal of attention will be paid to the most important branches of agriculture, especially in Manitoba, such as wheat-growing and other cereals. Attention will also be paid to stock raising, and it is intended to institute a series of experiments in the cultivation of grasses for permanent pastures, so that cattle may have green pasture at different seasons. Much attention is now being paid to this branch in Ontario. Everything will be done that will prove helpful to agriculture. In fruit culture I have made arrangements to cultivate a large collection of those hardy Russian varieties, which have proved so successful in the northern parts of Iowa, where the conditions of climate are very similar to those which prevail over a large portion of the Northwest. The intention is to propagate them at the central station near Ottawa, and then distribute them over the Northwest to be tested. He was not certain there would be any charge made for distributing these trees; if so it would be a merely nominal one. This will apply not only to apple trees but in all varieties of fruit which are likely to succeed. We have secured some fine hardy varieties of Russian apple, pear, cherry and plum trees, which promise to be much hardier than those grown in more favorable sections of Ontario. The different features will necessarily shape themselves somewhat after the wishes and desires of the agricultural country here. My intention is to see as many as possible of the farming class, so as to obtain all information possible upon the subject. It is not proposed to have any teaching staff at present in connection with the farms, but to disseminate all the information gained by the experiments from time to time by the issue of bulletins, which will be well distributed over the country. These bulletins will be issued three or four times a year. Each of these outlying stations or farms will have a superintendent of agriculture and a horticulturist, who will take charge of the work and carry it on as may be directed from time to time by the directorate after consultation with him. The object is to make the farm as useful and efficient as can possibly be done, so as to further the interests of agriculture in every portion of the Dominion.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk of Canada, for the week ending Nov. 6th, show an increase of $25,579 compared with the same week of last year.

FROM OTTAWA.

The Colonization Companies—Wood Mountain Railway—The Revenue, &c.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—The Department of the Interior is engaged in issuing scrip to those Colonization Companies that elected to accept it on account of their deposits. Other companies have accepted the land standard value, while a few have decided to go in on the old arrangements. The receipts from colonization companies since 1882 aggregate $2,934,455. In 1882 they were over $350,000. Last year they were over $1,214.

Mr. Jackson, of Qu'Appelle, has left for home. He says the construction of the Wood Mountain & Qu'Appelle road will be commenced in the spring. He has arranged for a land grant satisfactorily, and claims he is backed with $2,500,000.

The inland revenue returns for October are over $350,000. Spirits alone contributed over $260,000.

The Manitoba & Northwestern Railway people have petitioned the government to have placed at their disposal the land grant to the Northwest Central, over whose territory they run.

An official investigation into the circumstances attending the death of a printer named Julian, in the Carlton county jail, has been ordered by the Ontario government.

A man in the employ of Perley & Pattie has been found dead, torn to pieces and partly devoured by wolves, in the vicinity of Petewawa.

FREE TRADE.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

ADAMS VS. COLERIDGE.

Another Scandal Case in High Life—England's Chief Justice Involved.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—In the hearing of the suit of Charles W. Adams against Lord Coleridge, his father for libel, Davis, assistant to plaintiff, testified today in corroboration of the denial of Chief Justice Coleridge's allegation that Adams had met Miss Coleridge in a darkened room for the purpose of compromising herself so that she might feel compelled to marry him. Davis swore that it was untrue that he was in the room when Miss Coleridge entered to meet the plaintiff, and that he was sent out for the purpose of enabling Adams and the lady to be alone in the darkened apartment.

PALACE BURNED.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Hampton Court Palace, in Middlesex, on the Thames, 12 miles from this city, was set on fire to-day by the bursting of an oil lamp. The fire started in apartments abutting on the Tennis Court, all these apartments have been destroyed. The flames have since spread to adjoining buildings and now are raging within a few yards of the Chapel and Royal State apartments, which are threatened with destruction.

LATER—The fire has now been subdued.

AN ALLIANCE.

PESTH, Nov. 19.—It is stated here that Austria, England and Germany have proposed that before a successor to Prince Alexander be elected the union between Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia shall be adjusted on a permanent basis. It is said that Russia rejected the proposal.

A LA HEENAN AND SAYERS.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Among the sports and noble backers the sensation is the coming fight between James Smith and John Knifton. Knifton and Smith are personal enemies and the fight promises to be the greatest that England has seen for some time. The fight is almost certain to result in Smith's victory, according to the knowing ones. Large sums have been wagered on the result. Nothing is accurately known as to where the fight will take place, and the utmost care is being taken to throw the police off the scent. It is said that some secluded spot in the Cornish moors will be selected. It is expected that the mill will be even a more desperate encounter than the celebrated meeting of Heenan and Sayers.

A CROFTER ARRESTED.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—John McPherson, who is known as "The Lendale Martyr," and Rev. Donald McCallum, have been arrested in the Isle of Skye on the charge of inciting violence. Mr. McCallum, as chairman of a meeting, advised the crofters to resist the removal of their cattle. Mr. McPherson also spoke at the meeting, giving the crofters similar advice.

BANFF SPRINGS.

Mayor Fell's Impressions of the Great Mountain Sanitarium—A Wonderful Spot.

Mayor Fell yesterday and to-day was the centre of attraction. Wherever he moves a host of friends gather around him, all anxious to hear his impressions of the east, what he saw there, and what he heard regarding our own province. His Worship left Victoria on the 14th ult. Nothing of importance occurred till reaching Banff, where he remained for a day. At the Springs he enjoyed the luxury of a bath. The water he considers to be really wonderful, and its curative powers unquestioned. The springs are situated about 4 miles from the railway; the road from which to the springs is a first-class one, it having been built by the Ottawa government. Surrounding the springs are a large number of tents and cabins inhabited by the

from all parts of the world. The hotel in process of erection is to be a large and a commodious one. Dr. Brett, the energetic manager of the springs and proprietor of the Sanitarium hotel, Mr. Fell considers "the right man in the right place." He is kind, affable and attentive to the sick, especially so to the poor. As in all similar places, many are cured, while others claim they receive no benefit. The government has at this point, made a reserve of forty miles square for

A NATURAL CAVE.

Mr. Fell visited a natural cave, about 3 miles from the springs. At the top there is a hole large enough to admit a person of His Worship's proportions. From this hole there is emitted a large volume of sulphurous smoke and steam. Disrobing himself of his outer garments His Worship descended 40 feet on a rough ladder. At the bottom there is a large pool of hot water; the cave widens out to a space of about 40 feet in diameter at the bottom. The water finds an outlet through a crevice in the mountain. If it did not the cave would soon fill, so great is the volume of water rushing into the pool from the rock. The water boils as if in a huge caldron. Many resort to this secluded spot to bathe. The atmosphere is oppressively hot, strongly impressing His Worship with Milton's theological Shoal. In the neighborhood there are many pools, one of which was the favorite resort of Premier Norquay, of Manitoba. Mr. Fell was impressed with the great natural and indescribable grandeur of the surroundings. He has no doubt but that it will become a place of great resort in summer for tourists from all parts of the world. This is the impression of the C. P. R. management, as they are on the eve of constructing a palatial hotel of gigantic proportions at the falls of the Bow river in the immediate neighborhood of their road, and to which the line is to be deviated. Mr. Fell observed a considerable quantity of good available land in the hollows of the mountains, and through which the line passes, that will yet be cultivated and sustain an industrious population.

AMERICAN HAPPENINGS.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Northern Pacific R. R. was held yesterday. It was said after the adjournment that only routine business had been transacted and nothing was done about the lease jointly with the Union Pacific Railway or O. R. & N. Co.'s property. Nothing much was done; but the discussion of the subject is said to have been prolonged, and the earnest speeches made are understood to have been warmly in favor of a joint lease and opposition to the project. A representative of the O. Transcontinental Co. in the board desired to retire from the committee, but his resignation was not accepted and the committee was continued. He informed his fellow directors that the committee would be obliged to arrange terms with the Union Pacific Co. if a joint lease was to be made, because the directors of the O. R. & N. Co. had no authority to act in the matter.

STEAMER COLLISION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The steamer Beaconsfield, with a cargo of 79,000 bushels of wheat, outward bound to Aberdeen, Scotland, came into collision off the Battery this morning with the steamer Britannica bound in from Mediterranean ports. The Beaconsfield was struck near her coal bunkers and water poured in extinguishing her fires. She was assisted by tugs to Hoboken. The Brittanica came to anchor with her bow badly damaged about the water line.

U. S. INDIANS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Gen. Atkins, Commander of Indian affairs returned to the city after several months' absence inspecting the Indian agencies in the southwest. He reports that affairs in several of the agencies are in satisfactory condition, and that the policy of the Indian office, that the Indians should abandon their tribal relations and accept their lands is daily growing in favor among the tribes in that section, especially so where the pernicious influence of designing whites is least felt.

A GENERAL STRIKE.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 18.—It is declared that a strike in which 20,000 cotton operatives will be inaugurated here in one month, unless the manufacturers grant an increase in the wages demaded by the spinners two weeks ago to have the wages restored to the rates paid in 1884, and which was so unfavorably received by the mill owners, and that such disinterestedness was diplayed in their neglect to notice it that the operatives of all grades became exasperated. There is now a strong feeling for a general strike.

MR. DUNCAN AND HIS INDIANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—In this morning's issue of the Colonist we are told that Rev. (?) Mr. Duncan is now on his way east to obtain the permission of President Cleveland for the migration of the Metlakhtlah tribe of Indians to the shores of the United States. Would not Mr. Duncan and his co-missionaries be doing the Indians a kindness and the province a great service if they only leave and remain forever away, and thus allow to subside the continual agitation for which they have so long been responsible, and the tribe to become useful and friendly instead of antagonistic, and a constant source of expense to the country. SKEENA.

Victoria 17th Nov. 1886.

OUR MAYOR AND GLASS HOUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—The great traveler has returned, and so inflated with his wonderful discoveries, and his accurate perception of things in general, that he cannot sleep until he unburdens himself to the Colonist. I have often admired the cheek possessed by His Worship; but when, in his comments on the Hon. Edward Blake, he charges that gentlemen with "stealing another man's thunder," I am surprised at his lack of judgment. Supposing it all true; Mr. James Fell is the last man who should say so. Has he so soon forgotten his opening address to the Council and how strenuously he maintained its originality until confronted with unimpeachable evidence that he had cribbed it from the Mayor of Boston? Forget not, my friend, "that those who live in glass houses should not throw stones," and remember, that though your capacious person may be refilled with many useful things you must be charitable in their disposition. Draw them mild if you would avoid further criticism.

SIGMA.

IN BONDAGE.

Mr. Willis Bond, the Conservative champion, appeared in the Police Court to-day on a charge, preferred by the Chief of Police, of obstructing Commercial street. Mr. Bond, it appears from the evidence, has a contract for removing an old building, and when so employed his workmen and horses were found to be in the way of "Jumbo," which was brought on to Commercial street to break stones. Mr. Bond conducted his case with characteristic ability, and opened his case with the usual speech when the court fined the defendant $10. Mr. Bond said, with a dignified bow and a majestic wave of the hand, "thank you, Judge. I bows to the inferior wisdom of the court," and retired to get the $10.

THE MURDERER MAXWELL.

A St. Louis despatch of the 14th announces that the Missouri Supreme Court has again stepped in between Maxwell and the gallows. The execution, which was fixed for Monday, has been postponed until the court can fully examine the points raised in the case. The examination of papers will not be concluded until January. The prisoner exhibited considerable nervousness during the week, and as the day fixed for the execution approached he began to show the terrible strain upon him.

THE NEXT ATTRACTION.

The next attraction at the Victoria will be T. Wilmott Eckert and Louise Leighton, for a season of three nights, commencing Tuesday next. Their repertoire consists of "Fun in Camp," a three act comedy and a comic opera of Pygmalion and Galatea.

STORM PREDICTED.

A special dispatch to THE TIMES from Seattle to-day at 2 p. m. says a severe storm is predicted by the Signal Service approaching from the northwest and all signals must be displayed. Mariners and others can govern themselves accordingly.

THE DOMINION'S DEBT.

At present the financial position of Canada is being discussed on the stump by politicians to a considerable extent. The Ministerial party and its friends are positive in their assertions that the liabilities of the country is many millions less than it is claimed to be by their opponents. During their late tour through the maritime provinces Ministers Thompson, McLelan, White and Foster placed the net debt at $196,000,000 on the first of July, 1885. Their statement was substantially, that at the period named, the result was as follows:

Gross debt, July 1, 1885	$264,703,607
Assets	68,295,915
	$196,407,692

This calculation does not tally with the repeated statements made by Finance Minister McLelan on the floor of the Commons last session, which were to the effect that on the 1st of last May the public debt was $281,000,000. Since that time the loan of $29,000,000 to the C. P. R. has been repaid. That is, the company paid the government $19,000,000 in cash and the government accepted unsold lands of the company for the balance—$10,000,000. Therefore $19,000,000 has to be substracted from the gross debt and $10,000,000 added thereto as permanent debt:

Gross debt	$281,000,000
Paid by C. P. R.	19,000,000
	262,000,000
Added to debt	10,000,000
Gross debt	$272,000,000

Now look at the assets claimed by the government—$68,295,915. Of these assets $29,000,000 were represented by the C. P. R. loan, $19,000,000 having been repaid to the government, and $10,000,000 cancelled by return of land, it follows that these two sums must disappear from the assets:

Assets	$68,295,915
Deduct	29,000,000
	$39,295,915

Deducting this latter amount from the gross debt as above, the case will stand as follows:

Gross debt	$272,000,000
Assets	39,295,915
Net debt	$232,705,085

From the above it will be apparent that the ministers were out to the tune of $36,000,000. They now claim that their statements were based on the public accounts for the year ending 30th June, 1885, and not that for the year 1886. In some quarters it is claimed that the net debt now will foot up to a sum of $240,000,000.

There is likewise a diversity of opinion as to the increase in the debt under the Mackenzie regime. By the friends of that government and the Liberals generally it is contended that the increase in the debt from 1873-4 to 1878-9 was mainly due to implementing engagements to which the country had been irrevocably committed by their predecessors—the completion of the Intercolonial railway, enlargement of the St. Lawrence canals, work of construction on the Canada Pacific railway, &c., as can be seen by the following statement.

St. Lawrence canals	$ 3,220,499 93
Welland canal	5,443,949 83
Ottawa works	1,63,269 87
Baie Verte canal	980 25
Public buildings, Ottawa	913,182 65
Railways—N. S. and N. B.	1,355,270 32
Intercolonial railway	3,926,339 12
Pacific railway	8,289,246 85
P. E. Island railway	288,622 73
Total	$25,447,168 90
Amount expended on above works between July 1st, 1873, and Jan. 1st, 1874, and March 1st and July 1st, 1878	1,000,000 00
Total	$27,447,168 90

From 1867 to 1873 the government of Sir John Macdonald added to the public debt $37,733,000. From 1873 to 1878 for public works that were placed under construction before Sir John Macdonald resigned, there was expended $27,447,000, so that the government of Sir John Macdonald, from July, 1867, to Nov. 1773, had incurred liabilities to the amount of $70,170,000. From 1873 to 1878 the government of Mr. Mackenzie undertook upon its own responsibility public works which added to the public debt $7,232,000. Since their retirement the present administration have added to the public debt $106,377,000.

Practically Sir John Macdonald's government are directly responsible for the whole increase of the public debt since 1867, less $7,232,000 for which the Mackenzie government is directly responsible. The gross public debt in 1867 was $ 75,000,000. In March last it was $281,000,000, and must be now at least $288,000,000. This would make the total increase of debt since 1867 $192,000,000. Deducting the amount for which the Mackenzie government is directly responsible—$7,232,000—leaves an increase of $184,768,000 for which the Macdonald government must be held responsible. This shows a yearly increase of $9,724,000.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

In the eulogiums passed upon the samples of Canadian butter at the Colonial Exhibition, we see rather a hope than a history. Canadian butter, till the creamery came into existence, to guarantee its purity, was not always good; often quite the reverse. Creameries are new, and by far too few. They have justified their existence, whenever tried, and they have only to become general to add millions every year to the wealth of the country. May the day soon arrive when one will be found within the reach of every farmer.

There is now little doubt observes the Winnipeg Sun, that the recent rumors about an intention of bringing on the Dominion elections at once were "kites" sent up by Sir John Macdonald to ascertain the direction of the popular wind. There is also little doubt that his visit to Toronto to consult with the Ontario supporters had the same object in view. The result of the inquiries has apparently been to establish the belief that nothing is to be gained by precipitating the elections, and it is now announced almost officially that there will be another session of parliament before the general elections. The probability is that there will be an early session, which will probably be called early in January, and that polling will take place about the first of June. Sir John is too shrewd a tactician to give his opponents the advantage they would certainly have in the event of the contest being brought on immediately.

New York Sun: While the Hon. Mr. Bowell, Dominion Minister of Customs, relents a little toward American fishermen by allowing them to buy supplies in Canadian ports for the homeward trip, the Hon. Mr. Foster, Minister of Marine, announces that the patrol system will be renewed next year with increased vigor. "Our cruisers," he says with some relish, "will continue their unpleasant task." They are to be reinforced by three more steam vessels, and anthracite coal will be used instead of bituminous, so that the crafty Yankees may not be warned by smoke long beforehand of the approach of the cruisers. Possibly, however, Congress may have something to say on the performances of these cruisers. This body at the last session turned the matter over to the Executive for action. And the result was that the cruisers continued to harass the fishermen without hindrance. Congress may have to take the matter up for the action of its own.

Although Henry Ward Beecher is a great admirer of Mr. Gladstone and took occasion while in England to express himself as favorable to the home rule bill he does not hesitate to say that he draws the line at separation and that were he an Englishman he would no more think of allowing Ireland to secede than he thought of allowing South Carolina at the time of the civil war. To giving Ireland a state legislature such as is enjoyed by each state of the American republic he can see no objection; in fact he thinks that it will soon come to this, not simply for Ireland but for England and Scotland as well, the federal parliament being left to deal with federal affairs. When the question is made one of local self-government our American neighbors are invariably in favor of Ireland being conceded it, but they see that Ireland has no more right to secede than any of the southern states. The Irish say they do not desire to secede. With Parnell's declaration staring them in the face, endorsed, applauded and reiterated by every Fenian in America, that Ireland never would be satisfied until the last link was severed that bound her to England, it is difficult to persuade patriotic Englishmen and Scotsmen that the Irish disavowal is sincere. The Irish argument is that Ireland must have home rule, whatever the consequences may be. The English say that whatever the consequences may be the union must be maintained. What is wanted is a scheme by which both these things can be assured.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE GREYHOUND INN.

Through a fruitful land, bounded by blue hills, in places dark with the soft grouping of trees, and here and there a break of lustrous water, went the white level road that led to Winston; cornfields to right and left, and tracts of vivid green soaring, and the bland eye of the ocean shining between the two tall heights of cliff.

Along this road, with steps that offered no defiance to time, walked Jenny and her old companion.

At last, coming to a turn of the road—a truly magnificent bend of lofty hedge, with golden monuments of hay behind, and a rich cool orchard beyond again—there appeared at the very bottom, or end of it, rather, for level as a river it ran just here, a gray stone front with ivy grandly endowed, and further on a row of little cottages, with a church to the right of them, pointing a flaming apex to heaven.

"Here we are, dearie!" exclaimed Mrs. Mead. "Winston at last! And the Lord bless it for coming upon us just when I'm beginning to think thy box here hath some pounds o' lead at the bottom on't."

"Let me carry it now," said Jenny, in a painfully languid voice.

"No, no. I'm still good for that bit o' distance. D'ye see that board hanging up yonder? That's the Greyhound; an' if there be no fire i' the kitchen that'll bite us a dish o' tea, Sally'll have no more o' my love, though it hain't six o'clock yet, if the sun don't lie."

A little inn was the Greyhound, to take the eye in a picture as a sweet bit of rustic putting, for simplicity inimitable. The building stood looking up the great highway, of which the road from Greystone was but a vein or tributary, so to speak. From the upper windows of this inn the highway could be followed, rising and falling in a white line, until to right and left it vanished in a tiny thread of white among the blue shadows. This was the great road to London from the southeastern coast of England; and the coaches that ran upon it were, by Greystone travelers, met twenty-one miles onward at a famous ancient city, to which they were borne by Mr. Franklin's coach, chosen often in preference to this stage of Winston, as it saved a walk or the hire of a hackney coach, and it was a pleasant ride.

Paying snail's heel to the scrutiny of slow eyes at the winrows and doors of the cottages, Mrs. Mead, preceding Jenny, led the way to the door of the inn, and finding it locked, put down the box and pulled the house bell hard.

They had not long to wait. A servant, newly risen, came to the glass, and after a prolonged stare at Mrs. Mead's features, opened the door.

"Tell Mrs. Walker that Judith Mead is come from Greystone to see her. And tell the box here box and lead us to a room wi' chairs in't, whiles our legs have life in 'em, if ye don't want the job of carrying of us," exclaimed Mrs. Mead. And the girl, thus admonished, ridding the old lady of her burden, conducted her and Jenny into a parlor to the right of the bar.

With a groan of weariness the old woman tumbled herself down upon a chair and Jenny sank languidly upon a sofa.

"Well, if ever I should ha' believed Winston to be so far!" exclaimed Mrs. Mead, lifting her bonnet off her gray hair and throwing it upon the table.

"How do ye feel, dear heart? Tired you look as I never see the like; but I have promised thee a good snatch o' sleep betwixt breakfast and the coach hour, and that ye'll git. And here is Sally, whose mother I remember as the prettiest-waisted wench i' this part o' the country. Don't courtesy to me, my dear, for my bones'll not allow of my risin'. How are ye—how are ye?"

She addressed these words to a stout, kindly-faced young woman, who had come suddenly into the room, and now stood staring at and courtesying first to Jenny and then to Mrs. Mead.

"Sally," continued the old woman, "we have walked all the way from Greystone to get a sup o' breakfast afore the coach starts. What have ye got i' the house to comfort th' inside of an old friend—and a lady, whose beauty should make ye proud to serve her? Speak out, my love, and niver fear to name thy choicest. Is it a pretty slice from a tender side o' bacon, with the eggs which the hens are now singing over, and a pot o' thy best tea, wi' cream to give it a dainty color? That will do—that will do, Sally; but I'll not ha' ye a farden for it all, if ye don't make the saucy wench, as called me through your glass door, brisk in cooking of it."

"What! Mrs. Mead! Who'd iver ha' thought of seeing you this time o' morning!" cried Mrs. Walker in a rich, clear voice. "Where be ye going by the coach? Not to London, at thy time o' life! Well, well! only last night did I say to Roger: 'Next time these goost to Greystone, see that ye fill the biggest basket wi' the largest gooseberries for Mrs. Mead, that she may know Sally is alive an' wishes her health.' How strange, now! An' it's breakfast you're wanting at once! That you shall have, an' quickly. Hit! Martha!" she called at the door; and a voice answered. "Here I be, missis!" "Run out and bring in what eggs ye can find, an' first set the kittle on; and if ye stop talking with jackanapes Johnny, I'll know you by my clock, which I am looking at now! There's breakfast for two to get, and if your she's tinder ye from running, toss 'em off."

She looked back into the room with a merry laugh which died away on her catching sight o' Jenny's face, for the girl had lifted her veil. Observing the change of expression on her friend's face, Mrs. Mead frowned knowingly upon her, with an extremely suggestive shake of the head, and then begged for the loan of a pair of slippers, which Mrs. Walker immediately went to procure.

"Now, mistress," said the old woman, in her kindest manner, and hobbling over to Jenny, "ye must make yourself comfortable here, and there's no reason ag'in it. A better hearted young woman than Sally there is not in this world. Niver you heed her if she looks at thee. It will be your beauty that fetches her eyes and nothing else; for this is a house of call, and them who kapes such houses soon loses all curiosity. You shall breakfast and then lie down for a nice sort o' sleep. Why, my dear, what beautiful hair is yours. 'Tis like putting one's hand on feathers, and just the color o' the hair o' some of them drawings ye see on church windows, when the sun shines through them."

This bit of praise was provoked by her gentle removal of Jenny's hat; then she slipped the shawl off the girl's shoulders and knelt down to take off her shoes and ease the little feet.

Grief and fatigue are by no means such conditions as beauty covets for their physical gifts; yet it was a question if Jenny's loveliness was impaired by the whiteness of her face and the languid droop of her eyelids, as the mournful set and curve into which sorrow had twitched the sweetness of her mouth. Her hands were folded wearily on her lap and her wedding ring glistened.

"How kind and good you are to me, Mrs. Mead!" she said. "If ever my darling comes back to me, how will he love and bless you for your goodness to his wife! If I could get a little rest first, I could eat some breakfast; but, indeed, I do not think I could swallow food now."

"Well, we hope to see you right," replied Mrs. Mead, cheerily.

"Are ye in y'l fit to see Mrs. Mead, exclaimed Sally, with her merry laugh, dropping the slippers on the floor, "and a slipper's a poor job if it don't fit loose."

"Now, see here, Sally," continued Mrs. Mead, rising off her knees with one of those involuntary groans which old folks like her will send up over any harsh exercise of their bones; "this lady wants some sleep, and I'll thank ye, my dear, for the loan of a quiet room for her, where the drawn blinds'll make her poor eyes think it night."

"If ye'll come with me, ma'am, I'll lead you straight to such a room as Mrs. Mead asks for," said Sally, with a courtesy, giving Jenny the "ma'am" on account of her wedding ring, which the quick eye of the woman spied instantly.

With a feeble smile of thanks, Jenny slipped her feet into her shoes, and, taking up her hat and shawl, followed Mrs. Walker out of the room, and Mrs. Mead went creaking after them.

Now, though Mrs. Mead had represented Mrs. Walker as hardened into incuriosity by her calling as hostess, the truth was Mrs. Walker was still, and was ever likely to remain, a thorough woman in respect of inquisitiveness when any real object of curiosity came under her attention. To this quality, which after all is harmless enough when it prompts honest and kindly hearts, Jenny was indebted for the promptness with which she was conducted to a bedroom and made comfortable in it; for Mrs. Walker was very anxious to have Mrs. Mead alone, that she might hear all that was to be told about this beautiful young girl with the wedding ring on her finger, and what part in the mystery his little play Judith herself was taking.

"There," said the old woman, when Jenny had stretched her length upon the bed and her hot forehead pressed the snow of the pillow—"there," said she, pinning the curtains together, so as to effectually darken the room, "now ye'll think its night; and a good two hours you've got, and every inch of it must be sleep wi' ye."

"Give me a kiss before you go," whispered Jenny, putting up her lips.

The old woman bent her furrowed face over the girl, and as she turned away the notion struck Sally that all three of them were in a very fit state to cry.

Gently they quitted the room and closed the door upon the girl.

"Niver was creature born more sweetly lovable than that dear heart," exclaimed the old woman as she hobbled downstairs, holding on to the banister. "Do ye know, Sally, that she is Mike Strangfield's darter, the Baptist deacon—him as talks o' hellfire as coolly as thee talkest of thy big gooseberries!"

"Ye dunno say so! Well, now, thought I whin I see her, 'Missy, I know thy face.' What, in the name o' goodness and mussy, brings her to Winston this time o' morn!—and she a wife, as any creature might see with one eye by her ring, not to speak of her pale face, poor thing."

"Is this the room I came out of? Yes, there's my bonnet. Now, Sally, no word dost thee get from me till my breakfast is gotten," said Mrs. Mead, sitting herself down; "and then maybe I'll make your eyes big, and give ye a secret worth all that iver you did hear sin' ye left your mummy's breast."

Such a promise was sufficient to put obscurity into a doll. Off went Sally, and in ten minutes' time a good repast was smoking under Mrs. Mead's appreciative nose. Yet, though the old woman did good justice to the sweet country food, there was a contemplative manner about her, a thoughtful hesitancy, an absent glaring at nothing in particular, the while her old jaws kept her temples leaping, that indicated a mind in labor.

Mrs. Walker, who breakfasted with her for company's sake—for her husband had gone to Marples and was there stopping—watched her anxiously and spoke seldom, until breakfast was done, and then Mrs. Mead, with a little thanksgiving to the Lord for her meal, folded her hands and told Sally all about the cause that had brought Jenny to Winston.

Her story took an hour to relate by the clock; and when she had made an end, what remained hot on the table was cold; the sun had come round into the window to look at the water, and the cool hours of the dawn had been smothered in the sultry arms of a burning morning.

"Now, my dear," said she, "I want you to go upstairs and look at the girl to see if she hears—for how it may be with the wenches I this night know not, but whenever I was married, as a young un, I niver could sleep. Don't come back now and tell me she's awake. If ya do ye'll spoil a good scheme."

Mrs. Walker went away softly, and, after an absence of five minutes, returned with the information that Jenny was in a deep slumber.

"But law, dear heart alive! what a beauty she is! More lovely than a picture! And there she lies, with her left hand ag'in her chin, just as if she had fallen asleep kissin' her weddin' ring. Poor dearie! I never liked the look o' that Strangfield somehow. Wood's all very well to build ships with, but when I see a man's face made of it, it don't seem to take my fancy much."

"Sally," exclaimed Mrs. Mead, clasping her hands in her lap, and frowning portentously on her, "can ye keep a secret?"

"Why, as niver you could believe of a married woman."

"What's the true hour for the coach to come to thy door?"

"Eight o'clock; true as a hair, if there hain't no accident."

"Sally, I'll tell ye what it is: Mistress upstairs mustn't go to Marples. I argeyed wi' her last night when she come to me. It's only her fear o' the neighbors as makes shame of her business yet; but if she roon away and come back no more, what'll the town think?"

"Well, now you speak it, Mrs. Mead, I'll be plain. If I did not fear thee say she be married, I'd niver believe it for her having come."

"There," shouted the old woman, "have I lived all these years i' the world to be taught wisdom by a wench. With might and main I argeyed, and, like her father, she looked at me, and that was the good I did. I told her I didn't like the business, and would have no hand in it. Yet, so what 'good natur' is, and what long journeys it putteth old people upon. But to Marples she'll not go with my leave; and if the coach don't wake her, she shall lie till it's gone."

"And what then will ye do, Mrs. Mead?"

"What then will I do? Ah, an' ye would like me to speak quicker nor I can think. Oh, Sally! thou art a cormorant for pews! Sitch gluttony! Well, well!"

Sally laughed, and looking at the clock, exclaimed:

"If she sleep for another half hour, she'll not get to Marples this day."

There was a pretty long silence, while Mrs. Mead reflected.

"I see what I mun do!" she cried out at last, with great vehemence. "Her mother must know where she is—for here she'll be all day if she don't wake for the coach; and that'll be my booty. Let folks speak ill of me, then! Is there iver a cart goin' to Greystone? Then must find out. I'll not walk it."

"Tut, tut! Johnny shall drive ye in the van. It's big enough to hold three!" replied Mrs. Walker.

"EXCLUSIVELY" WRONG.

The Colonist a few days ago published an "exclusive" (whatever that may mean) telegram from Medicine Hat, N. W. T., relative to the visit of Prof. Saunders to this province for the purpose of making a selection of a site for the proposed experimental farm to be established in this province, in which it was stated that four or five thousand acres would be purchased on the Island or mainland for this institution. THE TIMES at the time took exception to the item as a misleading one, intended by the party sending it as one of his customary "boomers." While in Winnipeg Prof. Saunders was interviewed by a press representative, and in answer to the question—"What will the dimensions of the farms be?" said: "Well, the central one, which has already been located near Ottawa is 460 acres in extent. The ones selected in the maritime provinces average between two hundred and three hundred acres each, but it has been proposed to have those in Manitoba and the Northwest comprise a section of land (640 acres). This will, however, depend upon the location, character of land, etc. In British Columbia the farm will be about the same in extent as those in the Maritime Provinces."

SPRING MOTOR.

J. W. Fawkes, Jr., representing the J. W. Fawkes Manufacturing Company of Chicago, has placed on exhibition in the window of the B. C. Stationery and Printing Co., next to the post office, a patent spring motor, used for running sewing machines, pleasure boats, lathes, pumps, churns, and all light powers. This company also manufactures quite extensively revolving display cases for all lines of goods, making the most attractive display known, as anything in motion catches the eyes and arrest the attention where all else fail. The power of this motor can be increased at will simply by the application of an increased number of springs, and with the use of the air governor any speed that may be desired. J. W. Fawkes, the inventor, was formerly known as the steam plowman of 1859. The B.C.S. & P. Co. have secured the agency for British Columbia.

A MISSING MAN.

Mr. Rutherford, of the law firm of Hodgins, Rutherford and Kidd, has left Ottawa for New Westminster, B. C., in search of a Mr. John McNab, who left the Metcalfe district some three years ago to look after some property he owned in that place. He has not since been seen or heard of. He is wealthy, owning a valuable farm near Metcalfe and land elsewhere. He claimed to be, by descent, the chief of a Scottish clan and was a generous, kind-hearted man, a batchelor, and very popular. He is a cousin of Mr. Rutherford's. It is feared some accident has befallen him, as he would have communicated his whereabouts to his friends were he still alive. He was familiarly known as "Chief" McNab.

UNITED STATES PRESIDENTS.

Mr. Dennis H. O'Keefe, a well-known citizen of Victoria, has secured the agency for British Columbia for the sale of the "Lives of the Presidents of the United States" from Washington to Cleveland inclusive. The authors of the work are Messrs. John B. C. Abbott and R. H. Conwell, and it contains a narrative of the most interesting events in the career of each president; thus at once constituting a graphic history of the United States, to which is added a chapter showing the progress made by that country since the revolutionary war. The work is also elaborately illustrated. It is sold by subscription only. Mr. O'Keefe will make a personal call on our citizens for subscriptions to this interesting work.

AN INDIAN'S GRIEVANCE.

A correspondent writing from Fort Simpson on the 7th instant says: "I am a Fort Simpson Indian. About two months ago I took up from Victoria about $200 worth of goods, viz., sugar, biscuit, rice, etc., and opened a little store. No sooner had I opened than I had to pay the government agent a trader's license. In this unincorporated Indian village, from our ancestors down, we have always bartered and traded among ourselves, and I think it hard to be forced to pay a license for that privilege now. * * * The Fort Simpson Indians have boycotted the H. B. Company's store, and any Indian found buying anything is fined $15."

WANTON MISCHIEF.

On Wednesday night a party of hoodlums (fortunately well known to the police) forcibly removed the gate at the entrance of Mr. Justice Crease's residence and threw it over a fence into the grounds of a gentleman residing on Belcher street. A heavy keg of nails, belonging to the corporation, was also thrown into the shrubs and contributed to the damage. Respect for the feelings of the parents has saved these promising (?) youths an attendance at the Police Court; but they can rely upon it that their future movements will be watched, and their midnight peregrinations will not be so leniently disposed of in future.

N. Shakespeare, Esq., was unanimously elected speaker of the newly formed house. J. J. Daley, clerk of parliament and R. C. Fawcett sergeant-at-arms. The speaker read a message from the crown appointing Mr. Archibald, Esq., Lieut.-Governor of the province of British Columbia.

A message was read from Lieut.-Governor Archibald, calling upon J. N. Muir to form a government. The newly appointed premier requested a recess of ten minutes to allow of the formation of a government, which was granted. On the reassembling of the house, the premier gave the names of the ministers:

J. N. Muir.....Premier.
J. Baker.....Finance.
R. T. Williams.....Provincial Secretary.
E. H. Fisher.....Lands and Works.

On a motion of the premier, the house adjourned till Friday at 7:30 to allow the government to procure a policy.

To-night the house will be opened by the Lieut.-Governor in state, attended by a guard of honor. The public are invited.

CHANGE OF STEAMERS.

The Tacoma Ledger is authority for the statement that the steamers Olympian and Alaskan will be placed on the route between Tacoma, Port Moody, Victoria, and Alaska on Monday. This is to catch the Alaska trade and as much as possible of the British Columbia business. The sale of the entire fleet of the Oregon, Railway & Navigation Company's steamers on Puget Sound has not yet been consummated. The Northern Pacific Company really only wants the Olympian and the Alaskan, but the Oregon, Railway & Navigation Company will sell all or none.

On enquiry here to-day the statement could not be verified, and is probably a rumor after all.

U. S. SUPPLY BILLS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The Clerk of the House Committee on applications for supplies and his assistant are prepared for the meeting of the committee on Monday next. Responses of the members indicate that their will be a quorum present. The compiling of estimates for civil sundry bills were received in proof yesterday and will be in shape for the committee to act upon on Monday. The estimates for the fortification bill, and the pension bill have been received; also the legislation estimates are expected on Monday. The sundry civil bill will be taken up by the sub-committee immediately upon their assembling and probably will be ready to report to the House within a day or two after Congress convenes.

NEXT SUNDAY'S DEMONSTRATION.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The government denies that it is making, as reported, extensive military preparations, including arrangements for the use of artillery in anticipation of trouble with the Socialists on the occasion of their demonstration next Sunday.

GUTTERSNIPE TALK.

The morning Muck Rake says: "The TIMES man seems lost to all sense of shame, and has become only an object of pity and contempt." This sort of talk is so crushing that we must confess ourselves knocked out in one round.

THE ASSAULT CASE.

The evidence in the case against H. Davies was completed this afternoon. The cross-examination of the witness by Mr. T. Davie, which will be completed to-night, will terminate the proceedings before the police magistrate.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thursday was generally observed by our citizens as a day of thanksgiving, and service was held in most of the city churches. A goodly portion of our people took advantage of the cheap excursion to Nanaimo, and not a few went to the woods in search of game.

—Ask your grocer for the Portland Roller flour.

—It is understood that Manager Beede will bring the bruiser Sullivan to this city.

—The N. P. R. R. Co. has failed in its efforts to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors at Tunnel City. It was a very arbitrary move on the railroad's part.

—Advices from Japan state the loss of the tea steamer Normante off the coast of Japan by foundering. Sixty persons were lost. The steamer had a cargo of tea on board for New York and Canada.

—Mr. Pyke, who played with the Casino opera troupe at the Victoria Theatre several months ago, has blossomed out as manager of the Pyke Opera troupe, with Jennie Winston and his wife, Louse Manfred, as the stars; who are at present delighting 'Frisco people at the Alcazar Theatre.
